

Productivity Without the Pressure to Optimize

What's the one thing that genuinely needs my attention today?

What actually needs to get done, versus what just feels urgent?

What can wait until another day without becoming a real problem?

What would "enough" look like for me today?

What's one small action I can take toward a bigger goal?

- What distraction or obligation deserves a boundary today?