

Self-Compassion

What am I being unnecessarily hard on myself about?

What would I tell a close friend dealing with exactly this?

What progress am I overlooking because I'm focused on what's unfinished?

What pressure can I release today without abandoning what matters?

What awkward moment or mistake can I finally give myself permission to move past?

What makes me worth something that has nothing to do with productivity or achievement?

